

Is it possible to identify dyslexia in students who do not speak English, or don't speak it well?

Dyslexia is not just about language, but affects many different aspects of a person's life, so it is possible to identify dyslexia, regardless of the student's first language. It is more challenging to do so if you don't share the student's first language, but using the CAML materials, it can be done.